talk about a complete peace and a just and righteous peace let it be known to all the world that this is what we mean. It is idle to talk about our anminilating the German people. Nobody, of course, has any such idea. It could not be done, even if we wished to do it. het be done, even if we wished to do it. We are not engaged in this war to try to arrange a government for Germany. The German people must do that them-selves, and they will get precisely the selves, and they will get precisely the government that they desire and deserve—just as they now have the government they prefer, whose purposes and ambitions and barbarism they have and sustain.

"Our part and our business is to put Germany in a position where she can do no more harm in the future to the test of the world. Unless we achieve this we shall have fought in vain. Confless and the President had no right to declare war unless they meant to do precisely this thing. Nothing less would justify our action. We are pouring out the best blood of the country, the blood of our chosen youth, upon the altar of patriotism. We are making every sort of pecuniary sacrifice. We are bearing an immense burden of taxation. We are mortgaging with our the same test of the country of the our part and our business is to put We are bearing an immense burden of station. We are mortgaging with our loans the future of coming generations. We have set aside for the time being the Constitution, under which individual liberty has been preserved and the country has grown and prospered. We have adopted measures which if inchecked would lead to the building, as the one hand, of a great bureaucracy such as that which crushed and mined Russia, and which, on the other, is stimulating the development of state socialism.

Taking Vast Risks

Tt is our intention to return, as our law show, to the old restrictions, protections and rights of the ordered freedom of the Constitution. We are taking these wast rights, we are bearing lase huge burdens, we are making these huge burdens, we are making these maneauxable sacrifices of life with a brave and cheerful spirit, but of have no right to do all these things fless we win the prize and reach the fall which alone can warrant and justify them.

The results which we must have, and which I have ventured to outline, tan never he obtained by a negotiated pase. Lord Lanadowne—and he is not some separant to think that this war table did way. He does not seem to have gone beyond the methods of 1815 and the Congress of Vienna.

As this war is utterly different from thy war that the world has ever known, it is utterly different from may peace which concludes it is utterly different from may the peace which concludes it is utterly different from any peace which concludes
